But Vermont's No Picnic Either

There were radio broadcasts and newspaper interviews all along the way when Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lamears, aged 56 and 52, respectively, left Beloit, Vt., last year and traveled by automobile to Clarksville, Ark., and settled on a goat farm they had bought by mail.

It was the proverbial trek to God's country, to hear the Lamears tell it over the air and in the press. A year later, they are returning to Vermont; and Mrs. Lamears complains about Arkansas in this classic lament:

"It rained nearly all winter. I was bent-necked last Spring. I was ill three months last Summer."

"My husband was out of work most of the winter."

Oh, so Arkansas isn't really God's country, not to the Lamears. But Vermont is a picnic either. A winter Wonderland that is something short of being really wonderful. Rain in Arkansas, you say. Well, it's just a matter of taste — blizzards of rain or rain down here. And speaking of rain, they got it in California, too.

So there just really isn't any place like the place the Lamears were looking for. They might try the Arizona desert. It doesn't rain out there — at least not very much. But it's mighty totemic.

The irritating thing about the Lamears' story is, of course, that they are pretty sorry pioneers. Other people have bought mail-order farms and made it go of it. They don't need to know anybody that went into the goat ranch business in particular — but what's wrong about raising goats?

No place on this earth is perfect, but many are quite wonderful. And the Lamears' story is as good as Arkansas — as she greets another Spring.

I can't feel sorry for the Lamears. They are a complaining lot — whether in Arkansas or Vermont, no doubt.

But what's worrying me is this: Did they leave somebody behind at Clarksville to take care of the goats?

Youth, Bride Deny Murder Knowledge

Minneapolis, March 24 — (UP) — Kathleen Birmingham, 17, and the youth she said was her bridegroom, today denied any knowledge of the murder of Kathleen's beautiful sister Patricia, 16, at Milwaukee.

Kathleen was seized at a south-side rooming house last night with Milton Babich, 19, whom she said married in Kalamazoo, Mich., last Friday.

They had been sought since Sunday when Patricia's body was hauled from the Milwaukee river. Patricia was shot twice and her body weighted with a concrete block.

Milwaukee Detectives Lawrence Papke and Edward Mazurkiewicz said Kathleen and Babich had agreed to return to Milwaukee, probably today. Babich has been charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor in eloping with Kathleen.

Kathleen said that when she and Babich ran off Thursday they had "no idea" her sister was dead. Patricia disappeared Feb. 10.

"We'd been told she was in Chicago and that she had applied for work at the telephone company there," Kathleen said.

"The first thing we knew about her body being found was when we walked out of a restaurant in Chicago on Monday. We saw it in a newspaper. She must have been killed right after she disappeared or else she would have written home."

Kathleen said she and Babich did not contact her parents immediately after they wanted to wait until March 31 when she would be 18 and her marriage could not be questioned.

However, she added, they had "relented and were planning to call her parents when police took them into custody."

The couple carried a Kalamazoo marriage license signed by a prothonotary, Judge Barber, but it was not dated or witnessed. Probate Judge Robert J. Barber was out of town at Kalamazoo.

Babich confirmed a Milwaukee police report that he had an appointment to meet Patricia at about the time and place she disappeared but he denied keeping the date.

However, detectives said they had information that Babich was seen driving near the spot where he had expected to meet her.

Capt. Adolph Kraemer, chief of Milwaukee detectives, said he wanted Babich to answer two questions: Why didn't he keep the appointment with Patricia? Was he in the neighborhood of Patricia's home about the time she disappeared?

Authorities also were anxious to learn how Babich and Kathleen came to have been married in Michigan so rapidly in view of the state's five-day waiting law.

The only usual waiver of the law is when the couple swears that the bride is pregnant. In such cases, the marrying official is sworn to secrecy unless required to give testimony in court.

Milwaukee police had expressed fears for Kathleen's safety when she failed to call home after her sister's body was found.

McMath to Speak at State Press Meeting

Little Rock, March 24 — (AP) — Governor McMath will go to Texas late this month to speak to the Texas Chamber of Commerce and the Texas House of Representatives. He will address the legislative body March 31.

Atlantic Pact Signers to Hold Key Meet Soon

Washington, March 24 — (UP) — Secretary of State Dean Acheson and foreign ministers of other Atlantic pact nations plan an important meeting here April 2 on East-West relations, it was learned today.

Informants said top diplomats of Britain, Canada, France, Belgium, Luxembourg, The Netherlands and Norway intend to be here for the treaty-signing ceremonies on April 4. Foreign Ministers of Denmark, Portugal, Italy and Iceland also will be on hand. If those nations accept invitations to join the pact as charter members.

Officials said the prime purpose of the April 2 meeting will be to reach formal agreement on the text of the historic 20-year pact. This approval is assured in advance.

In addition, the conferees are slated to consider future measures to build the treaty into a forceful weapon to forestall any Russian aggression. Soviet reaction to the treaty, interim plans to protect smaller powers until the pact is operating, and other matters are expected to be discussed.

General East-West problems including those of Germany, Austria, the Berlin blockade, and Communist advances in Asia are certain to be the topics of separate study by Acheson, British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman.

While the first formal meeting of the foreign ministers will touch on development of a common strategic defense plan, officials said that creation of a high-level pact council and a defense committee will come only after the treaty is ratified. This is expected by the end of May.

These two organizations will be the chief operating units of the treaty. They will develop and maintain a plan of continuous and effective assistance by treaty signatories to resist armed attacks.

Personnel on the two top bodies has not been decided. But officials said representatives on the overall council could be foreign ministers, their undersecretaries, or special representatives. The defense committee could include defense ministers, their deputies, or high military leaders appointed by each government.

But he said another war is not inevitable and the Atlantic Pact should be ratified without delay because "it will help prevent another war."

Byrnes said Russia forced the signing of the Atlantic Pact by using the veto to weaken the United Nations.

Rejecting "our generous offer to share atomic secrets with other nations under international control and with proper safeguards," he said, "Russia is in violation of its solemn promise."

Causing Communists in this and other countries to say that they would support Russia in a war with the countries in which they lie.

At a meeting last night of the people the world over will acquiesce of responsibility because of rapid total demobilization after World War II and our patience in peace negotiations.

Teenagers Can Now Get Music Through Hats

New York, March 24 — (AP) — Teenagers now can get music through their hats.

A Brooklyn specialty manufacturer has come up with a radio hat—a two-tube affair built into a headpiece resembling a pith helmet.

The tubes are set on the outside of the hat, resembling two horses and a ring aerial is attached to the back of the brim. An attached earphone covers one ear when the hat is placed on the head. Batteries are in a pocket pack.

The Merril Corp., has brought them out in six or seven bright colors and says outdoor tests have brought in 10 or 11 New York area stations.

We enjoyed the last two days of our four-day trip to Italy, but the first two days and finally had to buy two new tires in Venice, costing us $50, and knocking us out of that much spending money.

Evidently, the snow chains we had had on the two back wheels ruined the tires — the walls of the tires were broken. I could write a book on our experiences with those flats.

We left here early on Saturday morning, went through Millenwald, the old violin-making village not far from here, crossed the Austrian border, went through Innsbruck, Austria, from which the road climbs and winds all the way to the Brenner Pass.

I was disappointed in the Brenner Pass. I expected to see something that one could recognize as a pass, but it looked no different in the rest of the road, just a small town where one must stop and go through the customs routine. It is exactly on the border between Austria and Italy. After that, we went through Bolzano, where we had lunch the food was wonderful everywhere we went; just like back home — our diet here is very monotonous, not many green things, then through Trento.

We had our first flat fairly early in the afternoon. Musser changed the tires without too much trouble and we went merrily on. We expected to get to Verona early enough to see the sights of the city, but we didn't, though.

Very shortly after the first flat, we had the second one, and no spare to put on. That was about 4:30 p. m. and Saturday afternoon in Italy. Musser had to change the tires, but we didn't, though.

Hope Girl in Germany With Army Husband Writes About Automobile Trip Into Italy

A Hope girl now living in Garfisch, Germany, with her lieutenant husband has written home an interesting account of an automobile trip from Germany into Italy. She is Mrs. F. M. Rivers, the former Vera Rogers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Rogers of Hope; and the letter was written to her sister, Mrs. Winston Mounts, 1020 West Sixth Street, Hope. The letter follows in part —

Here and There in Arkansas

Little Rock, March 24 — (UP) — The resignation of Trooper W. E. Gardner from District No. 3 at Fort Smith took effect today.

State Police Director Herman Lindsey announced the resignation here yesterday. Lindsey said he understood Gardner was to enter the United States Army company.

He added that the resignation had no connection with investigation of alleged gambling and liquor activities that has been directed toward some of the troopers in the district.

Lindsey said, however, that the investigation still is under way.

Little Rock, March 24 — (AP) — Tests which will determine whether a smelting furnace will be located in Arkansas are to be started soon.

Executive Director Wayne Fletcher of the state resources and development commission said a crew of Steel Engineers, Inc. of Warren, Ohio, would conduct preliminary prospecting of iron ore deposits in four northern Arkansas counties—Randolph, Sharp, Fulton and Lawrence.

Williams, head of Steel Engineers, Inc., who has been in Little Rock, declined to discuss what might result from the tests.

Arkansas congressmen have quoted Williams as saying he would like to see the pig iron plants in Arkansas and three in Missouri and later combine them in an integrated steel producing plant.

Plac Bluff, March 24 — (AP) — A new lightweight cotton picker, designed by John D. Rust, will be manufactured by Ben Pearson, Inc., here, maker of archery equipment.

Orders for the first 100 pickers have been taken. The estimated price is $3,750 each. The company guarantees delivery of these 100 by next December 31.

Little Rock, March 24 — (AP) — Governor McMath has signed into law a bill which will exempt half cent tax refund to farmers on agricultural gasoline.

The governor yesterday also signed a bill which places whiskey, beer and wine under the two per cent sales tax. He approved a number of appropriation measures, including $42,000 annually for the welfare department.

Little Rock, March 24 — (AP) — The four, Chief Gann, Nailey, Captain Joe Mann, Captain Fred L. Davis, and Captain Clayton Davis, were overcome by fumes from refrigeration equipment. They were reported recovering.

The building at 1210 East Sixth street, occupied by the Refrigeration and Electric Supply company, was constructed recently of reinforced concrete.

Firemen had to break out skylights to get into the burning building. There was no estimate of damage to contents of the structure, the interior of which was gutted.

Woman Receives Year Sentence for Slaying Husband

Oseola, March 24 — (AP) — Attorneys made their final arguments today in the trial of Guin Holland, 31, on a charge of first degree murder for the slaying of a brother-in-law.

Testimony was completed late yesterday. Holland testified he shot Freddie Bynum, 24, in self-defense 1st January 3. The two men quarreled over a truck and Bynum drew a pistol, he said. The shooting occurred in the yard of the Holland home at Marie, Ark.

Diamond Merchant Robbed of $25,000 in Uncut Gems

Miami, Fla., March 24 — (UP) — A New York diamond merchant suffered from "nervous shock" in a hospital here today following a harrowing two-hour ride with a bandit who robbed him of $25,000 in uncut gems.

Fred Yavitz, 49, told from his hospital bed how the bandit was waiting for him in his car when he returned from calling on a client in Hollywood, Fla.

Yavitz said the gunman forced him to drive for two hours, threatening numerous times to shoot him if he didn't "behave."

Efforts to attract attention by stalling his car and running a stop light in front of a policeman failed, Yavitz said, and each try brought new threats from the gunman.

The bandit finally took Yavitz's black jewel case and ordered him to stop on a deserted side street where a late model sedan was apparently waiting for him.

Food Prices in State Cheaper Survey Shows

By HARLEY PERSHING

Little Rock, March 24 — (AP) — A five dollar bill will get you more groceries in Arkansas now than it did last July — when the cost of living was at its peak.

Housewives also are able to buy more of their food cheaper at present than they could three months ago.

Several agencies and organizations which keep a stop-watch on the fast pace of the food dollar reported today that cost of groceries in Arkansas has taken a "decided downward dip."

"We Clothe the Family for Less"

ROGER THE LODGER

By Elizabeth R. Roberts

COPYRIGHT BY GREENBERG PUBLISHER
DISTRIBUTED BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

The Story: Housing shortage early in the war gives Mr. and Mrs. Roberts a guest—Sergeant Phillips, attached to an airbase headquarters. Roger the Lodger, as he is nicknamed, nominates himself one of the family, takes over duties of the host, becomes the family chauffeur and announces he will drive Mrs. Roberts to church on Sunday.

I walked to the garage with Roger. Bobbie's car was parked next to mine. "You know," opined Roger, "a sedan is elegant, but a roadster is swank. Yes, sir. Particularly a convertible."

I dashed Roger's hopes and climbed into the sedan. "Later that day the canteen called to tell me that an unusually large crowd had depleted supplies. Though wholesalers would sell butter and cream and bread on Sunday, they were unable to deliver it, which meant that I had to pick up the items. Scarcely had I hung up the receiver from giving the order to the bakery and creamery when Roger came up the stairs on the run, zipping his jacket as he took the steps two at a time.

He held out his hand for the car keys. To my questioning look, he replied that the snow was thawing, he wouldn't feel comfortable having me out on the slippery street alone. I was beginning to catch on that I was a trail little flower, no longer equal to breast-riding, unaided, the hazards of a Montana winter. Or that what I thought was a lodger had turned out to be a chauffeur. I was beginning to see the possibility of being able to make headed remarks re speed, parking spaces—even the loaf of bread I'd forgotten.

After we delivered the groceries to the canteen, Roger asked whether I wouldn't be interested in driving to the Base and seeing how its development was progressing. We drove to the Base.

Gore Field was built upon a bench which rises steeply above the level of Great Falls. The road which led to it was a right-angle turn off the main highway. Army roads were built high with deep drainage ditches on each side, and when snow covered the ground, black flags placed on either side of the road at frequent intervals marked its course. We drove front and center between the black flag markers down the Army road until we came to a large parking lot near Headquarters Company. Here Roger negotiated the narrow earthwork which bridged the ditch and joined the parking lot to the road. He sprang out of the car, not before he had given the horn a tap that brought heads to every window.

Roger ran into his office, stayed but a few seconds. When he came out again, heads were still at all the windows. He regarded the big sedan from every angle with proprietary interest, then sat down that all was well, he slid into place behind the wheel. He stepped on the starter, threw the car into reverse, and promptly backed into a ditch. A loud "guffaw" went up from the crowd.

"It's all right," Roger assured me. "The motor pool will have us out in no time." Forthwith he again sprang from the car, swinging his arms importantly. He strode into the building to call the motor pool.

In a very few minutes a towcar with a hoist appeared. As it hooked on to the front end of the car, Roger watched with as much pride as any small boy could possibly exhibit at seeing the fire engine he had summoned put out a blaze.

With the car once again balanced squarely on its own four wheels, Roger stepped on the starter, threw the car into low, and headed for what he presumed was a similar bridge at the opposite end of the parking space. It was a thin crust of slush and ice through which the car promptly sank. Be it said to Roger's credit, he was not flustered. If anything, he was even more pleased than before. He now had a two-alarm fire to his credit.

A few sniggering comments and the crew of the wrecker, egged on by the hoots and catcalls of the new, completely uncaring audience hooked on again, this time to the rear bumper for a change, and drew us back to the parking lot level. I indicated to Roger that I'd be glad to drive it if—

He interrupted me. He would now take me on a personally escorted tour of the Base. He backed slowly for a few feet, made a half turn forward, got squared away to Sunday," I replied. "We just the little bridge, and, encouraged by the loudly cheering hoi polloi, drove successfully to the main road. While we were in the Post Exchange, Roger asked what little things he could pick up toward our dinner.

"Oh, we don't have dinner on have a pot-luck supper."

"Entirely civilized," he agreed. "But getting back to my question: what is there you would like that I might be able to contribute?" Ignoring my look, he went on. "You must let me get the supper. Sunday should be your day off. And you'd be surprised at how handy I am."

He wasn't handy in the kitchen only; he was handy in the bar, which he pre-empted while I was hanging up my hat and coat. "Sun, he said to Rob, 'what can I make for you?' Noting that I had entered the room, he added graciously, "And for you, fair lady?" He made three highballs until the balance of our quota of rationed whiskey for that week was gone. Then he lent me a hand in the kitchen, and he later helped with the dishes. No reference was made to the antics of the afternoon I waited for Roger to tell on himself, but he didn't seem to consider it a subject for conversation.

New York Girl to Wed British Golf Champion

Palm Beach, Fla., March 24. — (UP) — Joanne Connelley, New York's debutante of the year, today announced plans for her wedding here Wednesday to Robert Sweeney, former British Amateur golf champion and RAF hero.

Miss Connelley is the 18-year-old daughter of Mrs. M. S. Huntington Watts of New York.

She said she will be given in marriage by railroad tycoon Robert R. Young, in ceremonies beginning at 4:30 p. m. at St. Edward's Catholic church.

Sweeney, 37, said that a reception in the home of Christopher Dunphy here will follow the ceremony.

After that, he said, he and his bride will leave for Augusta, Ga., where he expects to play in masters golf tourney.

Prospective bridegroom is owner of the famous manor house at Stokepoges, near London. He was decorated with the Distinguished Flying Cross for his operations against submarines in World War II.

Sweeney is a member of the royal and ancient club, cradle of golf, in St. Andrews, Scotland. He won the British amateur title in 1937.

The couple will leave from Augusta for England, Sweeney said. Miss Connelley made her debut at the cotillion ball last December at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel in New York.

Lucky enough to have it practically in front of a garage; however, because it was Sunday, they couldn't fix the flat, only change the tire. They had no electricity on Sunday, they said. Trying to get them to explain why they needed electricity to fix a flat was another matter.

We were stopped in front of a house and, almost immediately, a large crowd collected in the yard and leaned on the fence where they stayed until we left. They ranged all the way from an old woman who had to sit down to watch to several young and two-year-olds in the meantime, all the Sunday bicyclers on the highway stopped and stood around the car. I think that was the first time I ever encountered such a frank stare. They will look you straight in the eye in a valet manner with no more embarrassment than a dog.

We had to go on again with no spare, and sure enough we had another one. It had got to be a regular nightmare. This time we were between Padua and Venice. Not long after we left Verona the highway began to follow a canal. We had passed several barges being pulled up the canal by three horses on the bank. The fourth and last flat stopped us right alongside the canal in another small town. That was the worst one of all.

To end your suspense, I will tell you that we finally drove on practically to Venice in the flat, but in the meantime we had several hollow laughs plus some lasting impressions of Italy.

That darn canal was full of the nastiest water — absolutely stagnant — that I have ever seen in my life, except in Venice itself. Both sides were lined with houses that were literally hundreds of years old, and untouched by hands with intent to repair since. The people were also untouched by education or intelligence, although they appeared moderately well-dressed. The people stand along the banks of the canal on Sunday, like the farmers stand on the streets of country towns on Saturday back home. We, of course, attracted much attention again. Directed across the canal from us, a very pretty girl was cleaning a house. She would bring a couple of filthy rags down to the canal, lazily raise them a little, go back into the house and return again in a few minutes and do the same thing again. Another girl, from the next house brought some white clothes down, rinsed them in the canal, filled a bucket with water and went back into her house. I shudder to imagine that she used it for dishwashing or something like that.

About that time, another barge came along, going down the canal this time, pulled by a man and a woman walking along the bank; a very big barge it was, too. The woman was in the lead harness. Their three children, two girls and a little boy, were perched on the barge, the boy steering and one of the girls washing "silverware" in the canal. I can only describe them by saying that they looked like extremely dirty gypsies.

In the meantime, Mussler had located a young man who could speak English. That is about all the man could do. He enjoyed himself immensely, because his ability to converse with the foreigners enhanced his importance in both his eyes and the eyes of his neighbors. After 30 minutes of trying to get some helpful information of the wildly jabbering and gesticulating crowd, we finally elicited the very helpful information that on Sunday the garages were closed, the telephones were shut off and there was no car in the town. Whereupon, we drove on. You can imagine how dignified we felt limping down the highway on a flat tire. Twice we were stopped, waved down — by people who told us that we had a flat. The second time, it was by two motorcyclists, policemen who suggested that we put our spare tire on.

The most beautiful thing I saw in Italy was a shining new Esso station on the outskirts of Venice. The repair room was lined with white tile and the stainless steel instruments were lined up around the wall and it looked just like a dentist's office. I do believe we must have been their first customers.

It was the end of our nightmare. We left the car there with the promise of two new tires on it the following morning. We took an electric trolley bus on into Venice, that is, to the point where all cars are parked. From there we went by motorboat on to town. There are no cars or bicycles in Venice. They have motorboats just like street-cars, with regular stops.

Most of the main part of Venice is built around St. Mark's Square and one can walk over the shopping section. However, since Venice is built on a series of islands, one can't go far without taking a boat or a gondola.

DOROTHY DIX Family Goats

Dear Miss Dix: Why are girls the forerunners and predestined family goats? Why do parents demand so much more devotion and personal service from their daughters than they do from their sons?

A DAUGHTER

Answer: Why the sex of a child should alter its obligations to its parents, nobody knows. Not even the parents, but they assume that the daughter is about ten times as much a daughter as a son is a son, and hence owes ten times as much duty to those who brought her into the world, though, Heaven knows, having been born a girl is nothing to give three cheers about.

Anyway, Father and Mother feel that Susie owes them a lot more than Tommy does, and they show much more energy in collecting the debt from her than they do from him. Take, for instance, the household in which there are no servants. The boys in the family are physically stronger and more able to work than the girls, but does mother make them help with the cooking and the sweeping and the dusting? She does not. She makes the girls do it.

And it isn't because there is something occult about these tasks that makes them a rite that only a female can perform. The best chefs are men. So are the best cleaners. So there is no reason that Mother shouldn't make Tommy do his share of the housework, except that she doesn't like to interfere with his pleasure, and it is so much easier to make Sister pick up after him and clean his room and scrub the bathtub after he has used it. Expect Support, Too

And when Mother and Father get the girls. There is never any question in the parents' mind about whose duty it is to support them and nurse them and look after them when they are aged and feeble. It is their daughters, and it is a curious fact that more men are supporting their wives' fathers and mothers than are taking care of their own.

And Father and Mother accept this as being perfectly right and natural. Daughters are born to be the family goats.

Dear Miss Dix: I am a widow with two children who attend high school. A man 20 years my senior has asked me to marry him. He has a pleasing personality, but has not had a job for the last 10 years. His mother does not want him to marry me, and my children think that he just wants to marry me for a home. Frankly I do not know what to do. Will you please help me?

MRS. A. B. C.

Answer: I don't see why you should be undecided about marrying a man like that. If you have any gumption at all, you will leave him to his mother to support and not take upon yourself the burden of a man who has nothing but a pleasing personality to offer you.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I have two

State to Get 39 Federal Buildings

Washington, March 23.—(AP)—Arkansas eventually may get some of the 39 new federal buildings suggested for the state.

The federal works agency included the proposed 39 in a list of about 4,000 suggested for throughout the country.

The list was submitted to Congress in connection with pending legislation which would authorize $40,000,000 to purchase sites and draw plans for new buildings. The bill, which also would authorize $30,000,000 for renovation of existing buildings, has passed the senate and has been approved, in amended form, by the house public works committee.

The bill, sponsors said, can provide sites and plans for some 400 projects—about one-tenth the total or the overall list.

There would be no actual work until subsequent funds were provided.

Among the Arkansas projects on the list is a $5,550,000 federal office building at Little Rock; a $1,100,000 postoffice and courthouse at Hot Springs, and a $710,000 post office at Fayetteville, and a $760,000 postoffice and courthouse at Helena.

Other Arkansas projects on the list, all post offices and all costing under $200,000 unless otherwise specified:

Ashtown, Augusta, Bauxite, Beebe, Booneville, Camden ($280,000), Corning, Danville, Dermott, Dumas, Earle, England, Eudora, Fordyce, Gordon, Harrisburg, Hughes, Huntsville, Leachville, Lepanto, Lewisville, Lonoke, Manila, Marked Tree, Marvell, Mountain Home, Ozark, Rector, Sheridan, Smackover, Stamps, Star City, Trumann, Waldron and West Memphis $220,000.

DeWitt Schools Seek to Change Court Ruling

Little Rock, March 24 — (A) — Attorneys for the DeWitt special school district have filed briefs with the Arkansas supreme court in their petition for a rehearing on a supreme court ruling which limits school elections to one a year.

In a case involving the district, the court held that a school election, under provisions of constitutional Amendment No. 40, could be held only on the regular annual date now the last Tuesday in each September.

The decision invalidated a $1-500,000 bond issue the DeWitt district voted to finance construction at a special election.

In their brief, the district's attorneys denied that Amendment 40, adopted last November, invalidated previous statutes allowing special school elections. They also contended the district election was held before the amendment became effective.

Some years ago the United States experimented with ten growing in South Carolina and Texas but later abandoned it.

it states, counties, cities or smaller political subdivisions could decontrol without the governor's okay.

The senate bill also allows states to remove controls whenever the legislature passed a law calling for that, and the governor approved.
 Individual states also could take over the control program if the governor certified that his state had an adequate rent law.

"I think that amendment letting municipalities decontrol is a bad mistake," Lucas said. "The mayors in my own state of Illinois already are objecting to it."

But even so, Lucas said, he would rather have the senate

"home rule" provision than the one passed by the house.

The senate measure provides for two five per cent rent increases.
 provided the cumulative boost did not push a tenant's rent more than 15 per cent over the level of June 30, 1947.

The first of the two five per cent hikes could be put into effect October 1, 1949. The second could be charged April 1, 1950.

The house measure does not provide for any outright rent increases.

The senate bill extends federal rent controls a flat 12 months and offers tenants who want it an additional three months of protection.
 During the latter period, no tenant would be evicted simply for refusing to pay more rent. Hence, the effect is a 15-month extension for those who want it.
